10-20-07-2 James Russell, who died of cerebro-spinal meningitis on May 28, 1872. Nowhere in any of the family papers is there any mention of Dr. Leet's being summoned here to care for James Russell. Was Dr. Leet a specialist who was called in because of the troubling, perhaps highly un-usual symptoms / cause of death? (on the James Russell case) Perhaps I can uncover more about Dr. Leet in other papers / files at the Historical Society? A copy of the newspaper account of John Copeland's accident is given below.
